TOWARDS A GREEN RECOVERY

FIRST ANNOUNCEMENT & INVITATION FOR PAPERS

June, 22 – 25, 2021, Hotel Palisad, Zlatibor, Serbia

Dear colleagues,

Successfully completed International Conference in June 2020, ENERGY 2020, as probably the only successfully organized scientific-professional meeting in the field of technical sciences, held during the period of reduced intensity of the pandemic, obliges us to invite you to take part in the traditional International Conference. from June 22 to 25, 2021 on Zlatibor, at the Hotel Palisad. The high reputation that ENERGY conferences enjoy in the professional domestic and international public implies the right timing and attractiveness of the upcoming XXXVI international conference called ENERGY 2021 – TOWARDS A GREEN RECOVERY. Our Conferences have definitely become the front line of the energy sector where science and the profession meet state and private companies and energy-related industries with the aim of tracing the paths of energy transition.

Today, engineers from the energy sector are facing dramatic changes, and the positive news of curbing the pandemic imposes on us the topic of the next conference - TOWARDS A GREEN RECOVERY - with a special focus on the EU and the Western Balkans region. The term "green growth" or "green economy" is often used for energy transition. In its essence, this process implies a radical transformation of energy, which includes decarbonization and digitalization. A fair energy transition also leads to decentralization and democratization of the sector, i.e. the inclusion of customers as active participants in energy markets, as consumers and energy producers. In the European Green Deal (EU-GD, presented 11. December 2019) the European Commission reaffirms its commitment to facing global challenges in the field of climate and environmental protection, which is considered the main task of this generation. EU-GD is a new growth strategy that the EU intends to transform into a rightful and prosperous society with a modern, resource efficient and competitive economy in which there will be no net greenhouse gas emissions in 2050 and in which economic growth is not linked to resource exploitation. The EU intends to promote EU-GD policies internationally, especially in the neighboring area. Thus, the realization of the EU green deal will certainly affect the energy sector of the Western Balkans (WB) region, encouraging its transformation. On the other hand, the non-participation of the countries of the region in the EU-GD will result in inconsistencies in the mechanisms for payment of fees for CO2 emission rights and may lead to the introduction of measures to protect EU markets from energy-intensive products, including electricity, from Serbia and the region. Joining the EU-GD enables the countries of the region to realize the necessary investments in sustainable energy capacities. The EU intends to integrate the countries of the region into the energy transition process through the "Green Agenda for the Western Balkans".

ENERGY 2021 - TOWARDS A GREEN RECOVERY / areas of interest:

Competent speakers will be provided for all discussions (panels), and special guests (invited lecturers from the country and abroad), representatives of state bodies, energy and industrial companies and the scientific-research sector will also take part in the discussion.*

We believe that the following topics will dominate in the scientific and professional papers and contributions that will be submitted to the Program-Organizing Committee of the Conference:

- strategic planning in the conditions of energy transition with an emphasis on accelerating the energy transition in Serbia and in the region;
- analysis of current performance indicators of the energy sector with the impact of the pandemic;
- new opportunities for financing the energy transition with the specifics of energy regulations;
- modern power systems and smart technologies;
- modern technologies in the use of coal, oil and gas and in the production of heat and electricity;
